> SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 17. (From the S. F. Bulletin, of Feb. 1st.) An Eventful Week.

The Electoral Bill, having received the signature of the President, is now the law of the land. Under it each House elected Tuesday five of its members, who, with the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court for the First, Third, Eighth and Ninth Districts are to form a Commission to examine the questions that have arisen in connection with the Presidential Election, where there are two certificates from a State. They are for the Senate: Edmunds, Morton, Frelinghuysen, Thurman and Bayard-three Republicans and two Democrats: and for the House, Payne, Hunton, Abbott, Garfield and Hoar-three Democrats and two Republicans. The judges named in the bill are Clifford, Field, Miller and Strongtwo Democrats it is supposed, and two Republicans. They on yesterday elected Justice Bradley as the

These preliminaries arranged, the two Houses will meet in Joint Convention in the House of Representatives to-day. The President of the Senate will preside. Two tellers will be appointed by each louse. The President of the Senate will open the PLANK, BATTENS, PICKETS, Certificates of the votes from the States in alphabetical order and hand them to the tellers, who will report the numbers. Objection may be made to the vote of any State which has but one certificate, if a Senate and Representative concur. The objection entered on the journals, the two Houses are to refire to their separate Chambers and consider it. If they agree in sustaining the objection, the vote of the State is not to be counted. Following the alphabet, it is not likely that any objection will be raised until Florida is reached. There are two certificates from that State, and they will have to go to the Joint Commission for which provision is made. No further counting can be done till a decision is rendered in this case. When it is reported to the two Houses again assembled in joint convention, objection may be made to its ratification by five members of both Houses-ten in all-agreeing so to act. The Houses CLAPBOARDS, LATTICE, will then have to separate to consider the objection. In this case also the concurrence of both Houses is necessary to over-ride the decision of the Commissioners. The Commissioners, however, are to decide by majority. Florida having been disposed of, the counting will probably progress smoothly till Louisiana is reached. The Florida decision, whatever it may be, will render more easy of solution the Louisiana case. After this is settled, Oregon will come up for review, and after that South Carolina. There may be a sputtering of objections in the case of some States which have only one certificate, but no inkling of what it is likely to be has leaked out. No debate is to be California & Eastern Doors, all sizes | allowed in the joint convention. In the two Houses when they separate, each member is to be allowed a ten minutes' speech, but the debate is not to last longer than two hours, so that all cannot avail themselves of the privilege. At the expiration of the two hours, it is made the duty of the presiding officer in each House to put the main question.

In view of what has already been accomplished and what is about to take place, this is a most eventful week. There is no danger that there will be other than a peaceful termination of the question which has agitated the country for months. The Electoral Bill was in obedience to public sentiment, which had already found such strong expression that it had practically become the law of the land. While the official count actually begins to-day, it may be several days before the result is known. In fact, as much time may be taken as is necssary, even if the investigation should be prolonged up to the day of the inauguration. One or the other of the great parties is to be disappointed; but the t per of the country now insures a peaceful acquiescenee in a result which will have secured with every reasonable precaution for a just conclusion. It is hardly more than a month before the next President is to be inaugurated. We may know before the expiration of the week who is the coming ruler.

Peace Prospects. A more peaceful set of gentlemen than those now in charge of European affairs can hardly be found in or out of Christendom. Every body wants peace at whatever cost. The only exception is grim old Gortschakoff, who still thinks the honor of Russia requires a declaration of war a-gainst Turkey. The Russian Emperor, however, is less warlike than his veteran Minister, and ad-vises Servia to make peace if possible. The Turkish Government, which permitted the Conference to break up without settling the difficulties, now purposes to deal with its opponents directly and make peace with them on equitable terms. To this end the Porte has already pacified Roumania, and has requested Montenegro and Servia to send delegrates to Constantinople to arrange terms of peace. There seems very little doubt but that Turkey will negotiate successfully with her provinces, now that Russia no longer appears in the distance as their backer. The turn affairs are taking exposes the late Conference to derision. Europe had precisely the same question to deal with at the Conference which are now being disposed of by Turkey without dictation from Europe. Each nation sent its ablest diplomatist to Constantinople, and they had the advantage of speaking with one voice. Turkey was not really supposed to have anything to do but accept the terms which the Powers offered or consented to give. England and Russia were the spokesmen, while France and Germany helped to make a solid and threatening background. But all this did not avail. Turkey refused to yield anything on compulsion. She was ready to promise to institute all the reforms Russia and England demanded and give such guarantees of fulfilment as she deemed consistent with her national independence; but she positively refused to permit these reforms to be superintended by a foreign Commission, or to have her territory invaded by a force of policemen not under her own control. The Powers threatened, but Turkey was firm on these points. The Conference was prolonged from day to day, and, at every turn, new concessions were offered. It broke up at last, and, just when all thought war inevitable, the Powers came out smiling as the advocates of peace at any price .- S. F. Bulletin,

Opium Eating.

RAPID INCREASE OF THE DEADLY HABIT IN A NEW ENGLAND TOWN. Most people know that the opium habit is increasing throughout the country, but few are aware of its alarming growth in New England. In Providence the city druggists report a more or less rapid increase in the number of their opium customers. and physicians find that female patients cannot be affected by less than four times an ordinary dose of

when it is taken to relieve pain; others, during great mental despondency; others, from an inherited craving for it, and others still while trying to leave off drinking liquor. Its use is not a characteristic of any one class. The contracted pupil of the eye, the sallow countenance, the placid expression, the dreamy distant look, which denote the opium eater, are found in the workshop and the factory, as well as in the counting room or the boudoir. Wealthy opium eaters buy the drug through a trusted agent, whose tongue is scaled by his pay; the poor usually buy their covertly, in the evening, usually saying that it is for some one else. Some try to conceal their purchase of the drug by buying in different stores, until almost the whole city has been gone over; others appear as regularly at the same place, Saturday evening, as the even-ing comes. The wish to conceal the habit is universal, and it is never taken, as liquors are drank, in a crowd and with merry-making. A grain of opium, or an eighth as much of morphine, is a dose for a beginner, but the desire and ability to take it grow so rapidly that five and even ten grains of woman drinks a coffee cup full of laudanum without harm. There are a large number of men whose weekly purchase of opium indicates that they use taking opium is by the use of the hypodermic syringe like the traces of small-pox from the marks of his morphine syringe.

The high cost is one hindrance to its use. Really poor people cannot afford to extensively use an article which costs $5.50 to $5.80 an ounce. Nevertheless, with the habit once formed, a man or woman will do anything to get opium that the most inveterate drunkard would do to get rum. Opium eating is, if possible, more seductive than liquor drinking, and the confirmed opium eater can have scarcely a hope of escape from its power; the victim is in misery whenever he is not under the influence of the

It is said that there is one opium eater in Providence who has fully counted the cost. He began to eat opium when about thirty-five years old, and finding, a few years later, the habit firmly fastened upon him, determined that he could not live, at the longest, more than thirty years. He was then taking half a grain a day. He figured out the amount that he would require in thirty years, allowing an increase of a quarter of a grain a year. He then made a deposit of money sufficient to supply him with his regular allowance during all those years, and now goes about continually under its influence, viewing life and the world in which he moves as if he saw them from the large end of an opera glass. - Providence Journal.
